

Is that an Alpaca? Llama Tell you Why!

Llama

Alpaca

Llamas are large with a very straight back
They have curved ears and can carry a pack
They'll guard your sheep while you're asleep
They descend from Guanaco if you go far enough back

Alpacas are short and they like to hum
Their back is sloped towards their bum
They're bred for their fleece (which doesn't have grease)
They come from Vicuna, in the Andean sun

A single alpaca is a sight rarely seen
But both are domestic and very serene
Llamas are taller, alpacas are smaller
They have more in common than difference between

A happy lama will seldom spit
Be kind to them and there's no reason for it
Treat them dearly and shear them yearly
Save their fibre to spin, weave and knit.

They are a ruminant and cud they chew
They orgle, they click, they hum along too
Llamas are taller, alpacas are smaller
And when you love them, then they love you!